

DRASTIC ACTION TAKEN IN RUHR VALLEY

Reprisals Follow German Attacks

(By The Associated Press)
The Ruhr Valley is again to the forefront as the focal point of the reparations struggle between Germany and the allies while allied differences in policy toward Germany are being thrashed out diplomatically in London, Paris and Brussels.
Daily sabotage activities by the Germans, such as Saturday's bombing of a Belgian troop train, have been followed by both Belgian and French reprisals.
The great Krupp works, at Essen have been occupied by the French. The Belgians are seizing hostages and are preparing a program that may impose penalties of the most drastic nature.
Additional towns are being occupied by the French in the Ruhr, while the big city of Frankfurt, south, escaped entirely cut off from unoccupied Germany.
In London the French reply to the British questionaire on the Franco-Belgian policy, impatiently awaited by the British foreign office is expected today. Paris indicates that the outrages in the Ruhr and, the Rhineland have only strengthened the French decision to hold firm until Germany yields.

LONDON, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The whole of the Krupp plant in Essen was occupied today and work in the plant ceased, according to messages received in Berlin, says a Central News despatch from the German capital.

MAYENCE PENALIZED
CORBENZ, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—Two time bombs were found at the entrance of the Mayence Tunnel today. One of them exploded with slight damage. The fuse was withdrawn from the other in time by a French artillery officer.
The French authorities have ordered street traffic restrictions and penalties in other forms imposed upon Mayence. The city officials will be held responsible for the occurrence.

FRANKFORT SURROUNDED
LONDON, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The big city of Frankfurt, on the edge of the Mayence bridge head, now is surrounded by occupied territory through the French military moves, being completely cut off from unoccupied Germany, it is announced in the latest wireless.
To the north in the Ruhr, French infantry and cavalry have occupied Schwerte, near Arnsberg, on the Ruhr, and other troops are on their way to Hagen in the same neighborhood.

PARIS, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—A solution of the reparations problem and the Ruhr occupation question by view-point upon France to change her perspective, is doomed to failure, according to semi-official information obtained today. Strong feeling was evident at the French foreign office against the British attitude and the tone of the suggestions in the recent letter to the Pope are based upon French concessions instead of upon bringing Germany to realize the necessity of fulfilling her obligations, it was declared.

French governmental circles are also convinced that the efforts of both the British and the Vatican to induce Germany by persuasion to change her attitude will prove fruitless.
"We tried persuasion for three years without results. One high official was quoted as saying today: 'Germany in the only thing Germany understands.'"
The only way out of the present impasse is "absolute solidarity among the allies as obtained during the war and joint representations to Germany," is the feeling voiced in official circles here.

Phone Strike Continues
BOSTON, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The strike of telephone operators in five New England states for wage increases and a seven hour day entered its seventh day today with service in Lawrence, Mass., and Providence, Pawtucket and Woonsocket, R. I., almost demoralized and with reduced service in a number of other cities. In Greater Boston, where union operators have been split into two camps, one fighting the strike and the other upholding it, service continued to be almost normal.

19 Children Driven All Night In Taxi Moved "Baby Farm"

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The superintendent of the county almshouse, announced today that he had telegraphed, so far as possible to parents of the nineteen children whom Mrs. Anna Siewers brought here Saturday after an all night ride in a taxi cab from New York with the purpose of moving her "baby farm." Two children are in a hospital as a result of the trip. One mother has claimed one child and the body of another who died from the trip.
Driven from Brooklyn by the board of health rules because her quarters there were too congested, Mrs. Siewers piled her own three children, two adopted ones and fourteen left to her care into a taxi cab, paid the driver $100 and set out for Saratoga Springs, where she hoped to rent ample quarters. The plight of the children when the party arrived here forced the authorities to intervene and the children were sent either to a hospital or the almshouse.
Mrs. Siewers, a widow since 1918, said her love of children had led her to take up "baby farming." She said five of the children she brought here were of divorced parents and the parents of six others were too busy to care for them.

Harding Aspires To Moral Leadership

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright 1923 By The Portsmouth Times)
HARDING, July 2.—President Harding is aspiring to the role of moral leadership which gave Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt their hold on that great body of independent voters, sometimes called "progressives" who saving the balance of power in the American electorate today.
Tingling his speeches in Idaho and Montana with a little of what might in other days be called "radicalism" the president made these significant declarations:
First, recognizing that his Hutchinson, Kansas, speech, didn't go to the root of the farm problem, he came out four square for the principle of cooperative marketing by the producer with a hint of cooperative buying by the consumer if the individual planer has not been worked out but will be submitted to congress next fall.
Second, he struck boldly at those Republicans of the conservative variety who, since the campaign of 1920, have sought to convey the impression that with Harding in the White House, union labor would be fought with the influence of the federal administration and that the "open shop" would be made the rule rather than the exception.
Third, the president preached a sermon on the proper relation of woman to the home but pointed out that social justice demanded living wages for the fatherless the mother, too, be compelled to work to support her children.

11,482 Aliens Clamor For Admittance To United States

NEW YORK, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—With a grand total of 11,482 aliens in port at the end of the race of immigrant carrying liners to reach port first under the new immigration quotas, more than 9,000 immigrants were still clamoring for admittance through Ellis Island today. Less than 2,000 of the new arrivals were passed through the immigration station yesterday. Six hundred others spent the night on the island and were examined by inspectors. The remainder of the 11,482 are being held on board the liners which brought them here and where, it is probable that many of them will receive the disappointing news that the quotas of the countries from which they hail, have been filled.
But one quota, that for "other Asia" was reached by the alien passengers yesterday. Under the classification of "Other Asia" are grouped the natives of Asiatic nations from which immigrants are accepted here.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2.—(By The Associated Press)—A homeless band of about 300 Russian immigrants, refugees on far eastern seas since October, 1921, sailed through the Golden Gate entrance to San Francisco Bay yesterday. They include a remnant of the Russian White Guard which fought against the Red Army long after communistic control was entrenched. Their loyalty to the imperial Russian government outlived the czar's regime. They were forced to flee from Vladivostok when Japanese troops were withdrawn from that area in 1921.

Seeks 'Nother Fortune

BELLINGHAM, WASH., July 2.—Walter Scott, better known as "Death Valley Scotty" who is reputed to have discovered a gold mine in Death Valley, California, from which he obtained a fortune years ago, is camped near here on his way to Grizzly Creek, in British Columbia, where he hopes to make "another stake." He said he had once "made a killing" at Grizzly Creek in the Caribou country, and could do it again. He left the Mexican border nine weeks ago on his way to the Canadian gold field.
"Scotty," who is 70 years old, is said to have spent fortunes aggregating $3,000,000.
"I am going to spend $3,000,000 more before I croak," he said as he stood beside his wagon containing his gold digging outfit.
The most spectacular incident in "Scotty's" mining career was in 1909, when he chartered a special Santa Fe train for $30,000 in gold for a night of way to New York City. He and his companions were said to have dissipated a fortune on their arrival in New York.

BIG FIGHT HANGS IN BALANCE; DEMPSEY WAITING ON MONEY

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 2.—Financial affairs of the Dempsey-Gibbons heavyweight championship fight were rapidly approaching a crisis at 12:30 p. m. today with the situation so serious that Jack Kearns, manager of the heavyweight champion, said he had doubts of receiving the final $100,000 installment due Dempsey on his $300,000 guarantee.

The latest turn of events became evident after Major J. E. Lane, newly appointed trustee of the fight, conferred with Kearns, who said Lane had told him that "things were in a terrible muddle," at Shelby, Mo. Lane declined to meet the newspaper correspondents at this time, but promised a statement later in the day.

Kearns said he told Major Lane that he would insist on complete fulfillment of Dempsey's $3,000,000 guarantee.

"They have until midnight to make good," Kearns said. "Until that time I can't make a statement, unless, of course, I get definite word before then."

King Law, Designed To Put B. And L.'s On Higher Plane Is Effective On July 3

This week marks another step forward for Portsmouth building and loan associations when House bill No. 88, better known as the King Law, goes into effect July 3, with regulations which will help put building and loan associations on a higher plane.

Among the important provisions of the new law is one giving the state superintendent of building and loan institutions power similar to that held by the state superintendent of banks—that is, the right to say who shall and who shall not operate a building and loan institution. Under the old law it was possible for a group of men to secure a charter for a building and loan company and commence business. After July 3, it will be necessary to secure the consent of the superintendent of building and loan associations before such an institution may be opened.

The superintendent, under the new law, may refuse to certify a new institution if, upon examination and investigation, he is led to believe that the proposed corporation is to be formed for any other than legitimate building and loan business and the character and general fitness of the persons proposed as incorporators are not such as to command the confidence of the community in which the institution is to be located, or that the public's convenience and advantage will not be helped by its establishment. This provision was made necessary because of the establishment of nearly 200 building and loan institutions in Ohio during last year's boom for which were secured by professional promoters who reaped a rich harvest by selling stock on which they charged membership fees. Under the new law which takes effect this week, it will be no longer possible for promoters to sell building and loan stock and charge a membership fee.

Attorney General Crabbe has just ruled that building and loan institutions, recently organized and which are selling stock with a membership fee must stop this practice July 3. In other words, according to the Attorney General, it will be illegal after July 3 to sell building and loan stock and charge a membership fee. This provision of the new building and loan law was drafted by members of the Ohio Building Association League, an organization comprising more than 500 of the old line building and loan associations in Ohio, who took this step to protect the good name which has been built up during the last 30 years by these institutions.

The new law further provides that in the establishment of a new building and loan company the authorized capital of such a corporation shall not be less than $300,000 in cities of less than 5,000 population and not less than $500,000 in cities of more than 5,000 population, and at least 5 per cent of the capital stock must be subscribed and paid in before the institution can open its doors. The new law also provides that building and loan companies may loan their funds only on first mortgage security on real estate, on building and loan stocks or deposits and on government bonds. It further provides for the examination of building and loan companies by the state superintendent of building and loan associations and his corps of examiners once a year or oftener and the bonding of all officers of building and loan associations.

Two People Hurt; 3 Machines Damaged By Crash On Pike

Three machines were damaged and two persons injured about midnight Saturday in a collision on Gallia pike near the Children's Home.

The machines were driven by Albert Hausman, formerly of New Boston, now of Ironton, J. E. Lodwick, of 1810 Seventh street, and Edward Stambaugh of near Ironton. Hausman and Lodwick were driving west on the pike and Mr. Stambaugh east. Hausman had the right side of the road and Lodwick was beside him attempting to pass when the Stambaugh machine and the Lodwick car crashed. Seeing there was no escape from an accident Lodwick applied his brakes and this caused his machine, a large touring car to swing sideways of the road and against a coupe driven by Hausman. Stambaugh had a Ford touring car. When the machines came together it caused Lodwick's machine to be pushed harder than ever against the coupe. The left fenders, running board and body being damaged.

Mr. Stambaugh was accompanied by his wife and five children. Mrs. Stambaugh was in the front seat and was holding a baby on her lap. She protected it by putting her arms around it, and in so doing received serious cuts on the hands from broken windshield glass. One finger was almost severed. Her face was also cut. She was treated by Dr. T. H. McCann who sewed the end of the finger in place. Lodwick sustained a bad cut on the back of his hand when the windshield of his machine was smashed. The Lodwick machine had both front springs broken, axle bent, radius rods broken and steering gear damaged. On the Stambaugh machine the front axle was bent, radius rods broken and radiator damaged.

Sharp Rap At Conditions In This City Taken By Pastor In Sermon

Sharp criticism of civic conditions in Portsmouth was made by Rev. Gerald Culbertson, of the First Christian Church, during his sermon Sunday evening. Rev. Culbertson did not take the conditions of the city as the basis for his sermon, which was on "The Mercy of God," but in discussing one phase of his sermon, spoke on the wickedness of the world in the time of Christ and now and brought the illustration closer home by speaking for a few minutes on civic conditions he alleged existed here.

Rev. Culbertson did not make his statements from his own direct knowledge, he said, but stated that had all come from trustworthy and authoritative persons, in his opinion. Rev. Culbertson, among other things, said: "It has been told me that a loan walked up to a policeman and asked where he could get some liquor and that he was told to wait there until the officer returned with a half pint which he did a short time later."

Another remark made by the pastor was: "There is a place in this immediate section where there is undoubtedly a ready supply of liquor, and where young girls are ruined. The girls make it a resort and auto lists stop there and take the girls out riding."

In discussing the sermon and his remarks today later, Culbertson said: "It's a certainty city conditions are not what they should be. Of course we cannot expect conditions to be ideal but we have a right to expect them to be at least decent. City conditions nowhere are not just what they should be, but here it would be well worth any man's time to clean it up."

Motorcycle Hits Porch; Traffic Officer Injured

While chasing a speeder in New Boston Sunday afternoon Traffic Officer Leslie Harris suffered two broken ribs when his motorcycle leaped over a curbing and crashed into a porch on Gallia avenue and just east of Cooper Bros. store. The speeder got away.

Harris had only one alternative, either hit a big machine bearing down upon him in an opposite direction or send his machine over the curbing, which he did. His machine was badly damaged.

Following the arrest of a taxi driver by the name of Harry Meadows Saturday night, J. B. Prostick, owner of the taxi, and employer of the driver, filed a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor against J. A. Thynne, the passenger in the machine of which Meadows was driver. Meadows was charged with transporting intoxicating liquor when a vial of moonshine was found on the driver's seat of the taxi Saturday. When their cases were called for hearing Monday in municipal court they were postponed until Tuesday.

Thynne became ill while in jail Sunday and required the services of Dr. T. C. Crawford.

Hearing

Two witnesses for the state testified at the initial session. They were put on the stand in an effort to prove Mrs. Stannard guilty of cruelty and financial misrepresentation.

Mrs. Fyrlis Garver, chief matron of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home at Xenia, testified that while on a visit to the Girls' Industrial School last November, she saw one girl locked in a room that was "very cold." She said there was no furniture in the room excepting a cot without a mattress and that the room was in an unsanitary condition.

She testified that Mrs. Stannard was away at the time and that she did not know whether the girl had been locked in the room on Mrs. Stannard's orders. On cross examination, she admitted that she did not have the same disciplinary problems at Xenia.

Miss Edith Grapper, a former parole officer at the school, testified that Mrs. Stannard had ordered her to pay $2.50 each to Frank Kelly and Carl Pigor, employees at the school, for taxi fare. She said Mrs. Stannard had ordered her to turn in five dollars on her expense account each month for taxi fare, whether she used taxis or not.

The former parole officer told of a request for a house maid sent in by a Wayne county woman. When she told Mrs. Stannard of the request for one of the inmates, she said, Mrs. Stannard replied:

"We have 500 thieves and prostitutes here. I guess she can have one of them."

This remark, Miss Grapper said, was made in the presence of several of the girl inmates.

On cross examination, Miss Grapper said she had been dismissed from her position when she took a leave of absence without authority.

Return Other Indictments

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Federal Grand Jury, conducting a further inquiry into the affairs of E. M. Fuller and Company, bankrupt bucket shop operators, who recently pleaded guilty of bucketing orders, today returned four sealed indictments in connection with the case.

Grand jury action followed a long conference of assistant United States Attorneys Joyce and Mulderr, with customs authorities who yesterday seized papers declared to be material to the case, from the baggage of Mrs. Nellie Sheehan McGhee, former wife of Fuller's partner, Wm. McGhee. Mrs. McGhee returned yesterday from Europe on the Aquatania.

Sane Fourth Means Fireless One, Says Chief

Chief Leonard of the Fire Department, today inaugurated a formal campaign for safer and saner Fourth of July, pointing out that while the holiday is less dangerous than formerly, it still constitutes a menace of life and property.

The principal hazard due to the use of fire-crackers, sparklers and other fireworks," said the Chief, "affects the children and consequently their indulgence in such means of celebrating the day should be rigidly restricted or entirely prohibited."

but the so-called "sparkler," which has become notably popular in recent years, presents a serious hazard that is too seldom recognized. The plaything emits sparks that in themselves are not harmful, but the wire core supporting the sparkling element becomes white hot and in that condition will ignite inflammable materials.

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—I am a little girl ten years old and I want you to tell me how I should dress in the mornings when I am out side playing. I have dark hair and eyes. What color would I look best in.

BROWN EYES.
If you want "regular" play-clothes, bloomers and middie, or knickers and middie of knai are just the thing. They may be made at home too, of any other substantial material and may be kept for playtime only. Miss little girls also like the plain little gingham dresses made to slip on over the head, with bloomers to match.

Dear Miss Wise—There are a few foreign phrases that puzzle me. Can you give me the meaning? Deo gratias; en semble; pro et con; salon; modus operandi.

WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

1. Thanks to God. (Latin phrase.)
2. The whole. (French.)
3. For and against. (Latin.)
4. Reception room for fashionable company. (French.)
5. Manner of operation. (Latin.)

Dear Dolly Wise—I am coming to you for help in a matter which may be simple to others, but I want to write a letter to my sweetheart and want to know how to begin and end it. Can you help me?

THANK YOU.
Begin the letter to him, as for any one else. It isn't necessary to be effusive. If you have known him long enough and if you are engaged, you could begin in the manner you care to. If he is just a good friend begin with the usual "Dear Harry," and end with "Sincerely yours," etc., and sign your name.

Dear Miss Wise—Will you please give me a recipe for Scotch Scopes? I have heard so much about them and would like to try them.

HOUSE-WIFE.

SCOTCH SCOPES.

1-2 Cup Lard,
2 Cups flour,
4 Teaspoons baking powder,
1 Tablespoon sugar,
1 Egg,
1-2 Cup milk,
1-2 Teaspoon salt.
Sift together flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Work in the lard; add beaten egg and milk. Roll one-half inch thick, cut, brush over with milk and bake in a hot oven about twenty minutes.

D. S. K.—If you will send an addressed envelope, I can give you the information, as I cannot advertise thru these columns.

SOCIAL NEWS

This morning, at six o'clock, the marriage of Miss Marie Noel and Mr. H. Glenn Duls was solemnized in the presence of the immediate relatives of the principals, assembled in the Franklin Avenue M. E. Church. The Rev. C. E. Severinghaus officiated with the impressive ring ceremony.

As the guests assembled, Miss Edna Marting, cousin of the bridegroom, took her place at the organ and played a selection of beautiful wedding music, and as the strains of the processional from Lohengrin filled the church, Miss Noel entered from the rear of the auditorium, accompanied by her bridesmaid, Miss Dorothy Duls, sister of the bridegroom. They were met at the altar by Mr. Duls and best man, Mr. Royal Marting.

The bride was most attractive in a traveling suit of dark blue with grey accessories, and carried pink roses mingled with lilies of the valley. Miss Duls wore a frock of coral satin crepe, and carried roses and lilies of the valley.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonials about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for my medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious." — Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N. Y.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES — THE BAD GIANT

"Gee, but I feel strong," said Jack, as he downed the last drop of fluid out of Trixie's tin cup. "Well, now, I'll tell you what that liquid was," replied his little friend. "Then she explained that the kettle contained strength broth which made her father strong."

"You see," said Trixie, "and keeps that kettle of strength broth boiling all the time. And every time he takes a drink it makes him more powerful than all the other giants. And at that moment Jack looked up and saw Trixie's father, the bad giant, come through the woods."

"Don't be afraid of him," said Trixie, as Jack turned, as if to run. "He can't hurt you now. He has come after a drink to give him power again and his fluid is all gone. And then the bad giant shouted, 'Wait until I take a drink, monkey; then I'll take care of you.' (Continued.)

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
Olive Roberts Barton

THE MAGIC BUTTON

"Here it is," he whispered. "I've found it."

"Would you like to go with me to Rainbow Land?" asked Mister Sky Bow, the funny fat little Rainbow Lander who bowed all over.

"Oh, wouldn't we just?" cried the Twins.

"Well, I don't see any good reason why I can't take you," he said. "I see you have on magic shoes. So come right along. But there! I forgot! Perhaps we can't get in after all. I'm shut out—that's how I happen to be here."

"Shut out! How?"

"Well, you see the rainbow is a big door. Rainbow Land is on the other side. I dropped my hat into that field there and was reaching for it when the door shut behind me and sent me out. And here I am. And here I'll stay and here we'll all stay unless I can find the magic button."

"Magic button!" exclaimed Nick. "Where is it?"

"Sh!" Mister Sky Bow put his finger to his lips and looked cautiously around. "Not so loud," he whispered. "It wouldn't do for everyone to know where the magic button is. It's on the side of that big gray rock where the moss grows. Let's see if we can find it. Come."

All three of them tip-toed over to the big rock and Mister Sky Bow felt all over it carefully. "Here it is," he whispered. "I've found it. Now all I have to do is to press on it like a door-bell. There!"

Then a wonderful thing happened. The big rainbow door slid up into the sky like the curtain in a theatre, leaving an open space through which the Twins could see a wonderful fairland beyond.

"Come!" beckoned Mister Sky Bow. (To Be Continued.)

Try Jerseys on Husband!

MANY husbands eat a bothersome, stove cooked cereal, merely because they are used to it—though it requires many times the daily labor necessary to serve Jersey Corn Flakes which husbands usually like better.

These new-process corn flakes have a delicate corn flavor and stay crisp and firm in the rich milk or cream in which they are served. Not like the old-style flakes that get "mushy" when the liquid is added. Ideal for children's "between meals."

Ready to serve from their triple-seal package that keeps them fresh. Your grocer will supply you.

ARREST MADE IN ADAMS CO. MURDER; JOHN SPIRES BEING HELD

Was Arrested At Wilmington Sunday; Sheriff Dunham Digs Up New Evidence

SPECIAL TO TIMES
WEST UNION, O., July 2.—Deputy Sheriff W. W. White and D. N. Williams, village marshal of West Union, lodged John Spires in the Adams county jail Sunday. He is being held as a suspect of the murder of the unknown man found on Brush Creek of Adams county on the 10th of June. On the Monday morning after the body was found Spires was brought to West Union and tested before the coroner. He told a plausible story and was dismissed. He immediately left the county. Since that time the authorities have gathered more evidence. At Portsmouth they received a tip that Spires would be at his sister's home at Wilmington. Deputy Sheriff White, accompanied by Mr. Williams and officers from Clinton county, watched for him in Wilmington Saturday. On Saturday night they went to Spires' sister's home, which is eight miles north of Wilmington. Here the house was surrounded while Fred Stone, taxi driver from West Union, went to the door to ascertain if Spires was present. Mr. Stone had decided that Spires was not there and the party was in the automobile ready to return to Wilmington, when Spires came out of the house. Offering to talk, he said for the information that the officers were claiming to want, Spires went back in the house, out the back door and through a wheat field. The officers did not return to Wilmington that night, but returned early Sunday morning. They found Spires at a neighbor's house, where he had stayed all night. He was placed under arrest and brought to West Union.

When interviewed Sunday afternoon, Spires was exceedingly talkative and gave a lengthy statement of his deeds and whereabouts at both the time of the murder and since he left West Union the last time. His story corroborates with the letter that he mailed in West Virginia to the man in Chicago who claims he is Robert Morris.

Mr. Spires says that Minor Hayslip who works with him in West Virginia saw him pay Morris for the car. He says that the man who was with him at Portsmouth when he went to the garage for repairs were both drunk. He admitted that the statements attributed to him by Nellie McGraw were true.

Sheriff J. L. Trefz made a trip to Spires' home near Wameleyville recently and a search there is said to have disclosed some new evidence. In telling of his trip to his home at the time of the murder, Spires claims that he came by the river road from Portsmouth, and used the Pumpkin Ridge road through West Union to his home.

The general belief of all who know the facts of the case is that the murdered man is R. F. Morris, whose address was found to be 605 West Eighth street, Cincinnati, Ohio. He has two small children and his mother-in-law lived at this address until a month ago.

Mrs. Rosie Francis, former wife of Alfred Brown, accompanied by Mrs. Fred Baumgardner, came to West Union Sunday to see if they could help in identifying the murdered man, but they were able to throw no light on the mystery. They live at Portsmouth.

Boyles Point Arena Declared Unsafe

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 2—The boxing arena on Boyles Thirty acres, scene of the Dempsey-Carpentier bout, is unsafe and no permit for its use for the Willard-Firpo match on July 12 will be granted, unless it is repaired. In addition, he said, many floor boards were warped or decayed and the aisles were in an unsatisfactory condition. The commissioner had sent two inspectors to visit the stadium which was built over a filled-in stream. "Unless I am absolutely satisfied that the stadium is safe, there will be no permit issued for the fight," said Seal. "If the stadium shows the slightest indication that it may not be capable of holding the thousands of people who will attend the fight I will not allow it to go on. I expect to have my report completed at once."

Chautauqua, Which Opens Friday, July 6, Has Fine Array Of Talent

At a meeting of the Chautauqua association this afternoon further plans for the first canvas campaign were gotten under way. The boys scouts will make a first round of solicitation with districts, appointments to various groups. Attractive prizes have been arranged for the high point campaigners and with the enthusiasm which has already been demonstrated by the local scouts it is expected that the check-up after the first day of personal solicitation in addition to the results of the individual campaigns in the respective churches which have been in progress since Sunday will show a big jump toward the stated goal 1000 season tickets.

The Chautauqua opens Friday, July 6 and continues through July 12. The big tent will be pitched on the Union street school grounds.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning a ticket hunt will be conducted by Advance men Harold E. Hall by which it will be possible for a number of children under 14 to obtain free season tickets for the week of entertainment. All children under 14 interested in securing a free ticket will report to the Chamber of Commerce at 10 a. m. Tuesday to learn the rules of the game. Every hunter is required to come first to the appointed starting place to learn the radius of the territory within which the tickets are hidden and also the regulations by which the tickets will be given when they are located.

An unusual event in the program this year are the concerts on Wednesday afternoon and evening July 11, by master accompanist, Joseph Baldi. Baldi's programs are composed of classical and popular numbers with many selections which have been made into Victor records by Pietro. Baldi is a native of Cologno, Italy, and has been a specializing musician since childhood. According to Bohannon Donovitch, one of America's leading musical critics, "Baldi's soul is in his playing and his music is in his soul."

But increase your red-blood-cells, and quickly the ruby tint of purity begins to glow in the cheeks, the complexion becomes Venus-like and immaculate! Try it. It will do it every time. S. S. DEMPSEY DUE TO GET FINAL PAYMENT TODAY; JACK IN FINAL BOXING MATCH

Promoters Of Big Scrap Say Dempsey Will Be Paid According To Contract

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 2.—Payment of the final $100,000 installment of Jack Dempsey's $300,000 guarantee is scheduled to be made to Jack Kearns, manager of the heavy-weight champion today by Mayor J. E. Lane, newly installed trustee, of the Fourth of July heavy weight championship fight at Shelby, George H. Stanton, Great Falls banker and Roy E. Ayers, who are appointed with Lane in the management of the bout, said that the money would be paid Kearns today in accordance with the terms of his contract.

Kearns was advised yesterday that $80,000 was immediately available in cash and balance would be in hand from the $5,000 contributions made by twenty leading business men of Montana.

"I have not a word to say," said Kearns. "It will be my turn to talk if the obligation is not met. I have every assurance however, that the money will be paid. The committee has until midnight to fulfill the terms of my contract."

Dempsey plans to do only light boxing today, bag punching, and shadow boxing. The champion finished his sparring program yesterday when he boxed two rounds each with Jack Burke of Pittsburgh and Billy Wells of England. Dempsey declared that he has never been in better shape. He gave a remarkable and speedy display of accurate hitting and footwork against the lighter members of his training staff.

Referee To Have Final Word In The Big Fight Wednesday; Gibbons Mauls Sparring Partners

ST. LOUIS, July 2.—The referee's decision may be considered final in the world's championship bout between Jack Dempsey and Tony Gibbons July 4th under a new set of rules to be formulated today. The commission appointed several months ago by the state law in accordance with Mayor Jim Johnson, treasurer of the bout and two others.

Montana rules heretofore provided for the presence of two judges at the ringside and the referee voted only in case of a tie. Owing to the importance of the bout, this rule is being changed, placing in the hands of the referee the power to decide the winner of the bout in case it should continue the 15 rounds.

Gibbons worked out before a record crowd at the open air ring yesterday. He will take only light exercises today and tomorrow. His weight now is 173 pounds. Eddie Kane, his manager, announced.

Gibbons worked furiously against four sparring partners in eight rounds yesterday. He reached them with his left which jabbed in and out with lightning like rapidity. Gibbons' judgment of distance was at its best. Repeatedly he allowed blows to slip past him by a fraction of an inch.

SO THIS IS SHELBY

By ARTHUR J. RITCHIE
SHELBY, MONT., July 2.—Are you coming to the Dempsey-Gibbons fight?

This is what you'll see.

A railroad station platform, a quarter of a mile long, filled with crowds that come down to meet both trains.

A typical oil boom town set in the mud in the middle of encircling hills, down which torrents flow every time it rains. Two main streets, one on each side of the tracks. In them dust when it isn't raining and mud when it is.

stage coaches, from the rodeo, gallop through the streets.

You go to the dance. The Green Light is an enormous one-story pine board shack with a floor that would do justice to a Broadway lobster palace.

A ten-piece orchestra sweats its way at one end and high-heeled cowboys and slim-waisted lounge lizards from the east, all with remarkably good looking girls, vie with each other in the eccentricity of their dancing.

Half the dances are waltzes to please Montana folks. There's no leotard. As fast as one dance is over another is started. The floor and the orchestra sweats up again. The concession proprietor realizes the bonanza soon will be over.

Down the street a crowd of sunburned range riders in eight-gallon hats and gaily kerchiefed necks joke as they plank down their 50 cents for their admission to a tented musical comedy.

Two Salvation Army men are helping a sick man down the street toward the railroad station. Some taxi cabs and their vehicles splashed with mud, buttonhole sidewalk crowds for business.

Bootleggers, driven from the center of town, ply their trade on the outskirts. The energy of prohibition is still in evidence.

Men Only

Half a mile out from town, over a road filled with ruts and gopher holes, lies the arena. Most folks go "walk talk the railroad ties. The highway's too rough."

If you're coming, bring an extra scratch for your money. Everything here is silver dollars. Tailors are doing a big business patching trouser pockets. The only man in town who ever has seen a one dollar bill keeps it in a frame behind the bar.

Are you coming?

Cardinals Beat Sciotoville Team

Before a crowd of about 500 fans the Cardinals nine took the Sciotoville nine into camp at Millbrook Sunday afternoon, 13 to 5. Shover for the Cardinals pitched a good game and was given fine support. Errors by the Sciotoville nine helped the Cardinals roll up a big score in the first inning. The box score:

It is understood that Tomlinson has no desire to continue coaching, intending to go into business. In that case Wood is certain to be selected as the chief of Yale's affairs on the field.

A great pitcher in his day, Wood has the facility of developing pitchers and nothing is more essential to success in college baseball.

McDermott Blanked

McDermott fans witnessed a mighty fine game of baseball Sunday when their pet nine clashed with the Beaver aggregation and went down to defeat, 3 to 0.

Beaver was the fastest nine to visit McDermott this season. VanFossen, the Pike county twirler, pitched a fine game and was given errorless support. Brannan also delivered a fine brand of box work and would have let the visitors down with one run had he been given good support. Four double plays were staged during the contest. Next Sunday McDermott plays in Otway. The box score:

Even Break

By winning Sunday's game from the hard-to-trim Pirates, the Reds secured an even break on an important four game series. But while this was taking place the Giants walloped the down-trodden Beanes three out of four. If the Giants had only Eastern teams to play they would clinch the flag before August 1.

Dogwood Ridge Stars Tame Bear Cats

The Dogwood Ridge Stars added another scalp yesterday when they took the Bear Cats of North Moreland into camp, 7 to 0. Fortner and Lewis forced the battery for the winners while Edlin and Vickers were in the points for the Bear Cats. Lewis clouted a home run and helped his nine win. Edlin had 14 strikeouts and Fortner 12. John Wolfe umpired the contest. The Bear Cats would like to book games with Portsmouth nines, especially the Industrial Stars. For games call Boston 30-L.

Saw Reds Win

Charles Flynn of the Times composing room was in Cincinnati Sunday and saw the Reds beat the Pirates, 3 to 2. One of the largest crowds of the season, witnessed the game. Laque and Donohue pitched for the Reds and Cooper for the Pirates.

New Marble Champ Well Known Here

Harlin McCoy, who flips a mean marble, who was hailed as the champion marble shooter of the United States, when he beat Sammy Schneider in Atlantic City Saturday is well known here as he has relatives and friends in Portsmouth. The new champion is a nephew of Mrs. Florence Miller of 2014 Baird avenue. Mrs. Mar Philpott of South Portsmouth, Mrs. Henry Triode of Firebrick, Ky., and Mrs. J. E. McCoy of Winford. The lad's grandfather, John T. Oliver, lives in South Portsmouth. The new champion, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William McCoy of Linden, a suburb of Columbus, arrived home last evening and quite a crowd gathered to welcome him. Harlin, who is a modest lad, was given a great ovation and before the evening had passed more than a hundred machines drove up to his home, many of the occupants being satisfied just to get a glimpse of the new marble champion of the United States. Harlin has been a marble "bug" since early youth and has always highly prized his big box of marbles. He was accompanied to Atlantic City by his brother, Golden McCoy. The lad's father is a well known & W. engineer and about two years ago was transferred from Keokuk to Columbus.

Porterfield Readjusts Prohibition Cogs

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2.—More Ohio cogs in the national prohibition enforcement machinery were readjusted in the transfer announced today of E. L. Porterfield, who has been stationed for some time at Toledo as divisional chief of the Ohio-Indiana-Michigan area, to Washington as executive assistant to prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes.

Porterfield comes to Washington to succeed Dr. R. O. Matthews, an Ohioan, who recently resigned as executive assistant to become president of Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

Another Ohio "cog" shifted in the general readjustment is William Walker, of Hillsboro, Major Haynes' home town, who was recently transferred from the internal revenue service to the prohibition unit. He will probably take Porterfield's place at Toledo, though John Harper, Porterfield's assistant, has been temporarily put in charge there.

It has been recently rumored here that other changes in the Ohio prohibition force were under advisement by Commissioner Haynes and State Director J. E. Russell and that at least two group chiefs might be transferred or asked to resign.

One of these is said to be Charles J. Burns, in charge of the Cleveland district under Russell's direction. No action is likely in any event until President Harding's return from Alaska, it is said.

Removed Home. Miss Martha Lyon, 2118 Eleventh street, who was operated upon recently for appendicitis, was removed to her home from Hempstead hospital this morning in the Daehler ambulance.

Touring In Virginia. A. R. Colley, N. & W. engineer, of 2117 Eighth street, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation touring Virginia.

Selco Park An Ideal Recreation Park

Selco Park, the new recreation field of the Selby Shoe company employees, is destined to be one of the features of suburban enjoyment in this section. Located on Hayport Road it has the advantage of a natural setting that could hardly be excelled as far as scenic beauty is concerned, and improvements are already under way to make it an ideal play ground for those who want to spend a day, a week or longer "in the country."

A baseball field has been laid out, the diamond scraped, bases installed, and the finishing touches will be put on it this week. Two tennis courts are likewise nearing completion and will probably be ready for the racket wielders the latter part of the week, if the weather is at all favorable.

A pavilion is being constructed with wide porches to accommodate those at the park during inclement weather, and as soon as possible a refreshment stand will be established there and soft drinks and light refreshments will be on sale as the demand justifies.

Several tents have already been purchased and will be erected soon, which will be rented for a small sum to those who wish to stay at the park a week or more. Cold and mattresses will also be provided with the tents and the cost will be so low that all may enjoy a real country vacation.

It is planned to erect later a number of cottages and to rent these to Selby employees. Picnic tables have been provided at different spots along the banks of the Ohio, and these are proving very popular. It was estimated that fully seventy-five machines visited the park Sunday and many of the occupants brought their lunches and spent several hours walking about the park.

Clyde Barber has been appointed ground manager of the park, and is already on the job.

Bloody Fight Staged On Market Street; Sheriff Makes Arrests

William Cullen and Henry Redden engaged in a real fight on Market street Sunday afternoon and their scrap drew a large crowd as both men were badly used up before Sheriff Dunham appeared upon the scene and arrested the belligerents.

They were released on bond Monday and will have their hearing later. After the men had used their fists for a while they armed themselves with pop bottles and hurled them at each other. Many of the spectators bent a hasty retreat when the bottles began sizzling over their heads. When Dave Johnson essayed the role of peacemaker, he was severely cut on the hand by a knife. Cullen had Sheriff Dunham said Monday. Johnson had to go to a physician to have his wound dressed.

Rollin Swisher, Democrat, Columbus, voted to restate Ferguson; Commissioner William S. Bundy, Republican, Athens, voted the other way. Ferguson is a Democrat.

Ganna Walska Sings While Hypnotized

In the famous old Latin Quarter of Paris, where Evgenia hypnotized the heroine of George du Maurier's "Trilby" to make her sing, Mme. Ganna Walska underwent a similar treatment on mental suggestion before she made her Paris debut in a charity rendition of "Rigoletto," in which she took the role of Gilda, in the Paris Opera House. Auto-suggestion was used by the hypnotist, though her actions on the stage were perfectly normal. Mme. Walska, who in private life is Mrs. Howard P. McCormick, wife of the Chicago millionaire, was not favorably received by the audience.

RELEASED BY NEA SERVICE INC., ABBOT, MEY, NEWSP. SVS.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Jenny Penden comes. Mark Brendon, famous criminal investigator, to solve the mysterious disappearance of her husband, Michael. From his home on Dartmoor, Brendon is best seen in the company of Jenny's uncle, Robert Redmayne, when the two visit Michael's new bungalow near Foggator quarry.

Blood is found on the floor of the cottage and witnesses testify to having seen Robert ride away on his motor bicycle with a heavy sack behind the saddle.

Jenny goes to live with her uncle Redmayne, and Brendon visits her there. Mark is introduced to Giuseppe Doria, who works for Brendon. Brendon falls in love with Jenny and her uncle Redmayne tells him that he fears that Doria is trying to win her affections.

"I appreciate the confidence and can return a confidence," answered Brendon after a moment's reflection. "I do admire Mrs. Penden. She is, of course, amazingly beautiful, and she has a gracious and charming nature. With such distinction of character you may rest assured that nothing will happen yet a while. Your niece will be faithful to her late husband's memory for many a long month, if not forever."

"I believe that," answered Brendon. "We can mark time. I don't doubt, till the turn of the year or maybe longer. But there it is, they are thrown together every day of their lives and, though Jenny would hide it very carefully from me, and probably from herself also as far as she could, I guess he's going to win out."

A few minutes later a song sounded from beneath and the two men descended to their meal. It was Giuseppe Doria who did the talking while they ate a substantial dinner.

Mr. Redmayne produced in honor of Brendon, and then left them.

They drank tea at five o'clock and an hour later the detective went on his way. A general invitation had been extended to him and the old sailor expressly declared that it would give him pleasure to receive Mark as a guest at any time. It was a suggestion that tempted Brendon not a little.

The moon had risen as he pursued his lonely road and it shone clear through a gathering mist that threatened soon to overwhelm the silver light. Clouds flew fast and above Brendon's head, telegraph wires hummed the song of a catbird. The man's thoughts preoccupied as frequently as the tidal and shouting wind.

Still deep in thought Brendon tramped on; and then, where the road fell between a high bank to the windward side and a pine wood on the other, he experienced one of the greatest surprises that life had yet brought him.

At a gate, which hung parallel with the road and opened into the depth of a copse behind, there stood Robert Redmayne.

He appeared to recognize Mark, or at any rate regard him as an enemy, for instantly he turned, plunged into the woods behind him, and disappeared.

CHAPTER VI
Robert Redmayne Is Heard

Brendon, for it argued much beyond itself, surely it indicated treachery and falsehood among those he had just left at "Crow's Nest," for it was a coincidence almost incredible that on this day of his chance visit, the wanted man should suddenly reappear in the neighborhood of his brother's home. Yet confusion seemed impossible, for Mark had given no notice to Brendon Redmayne of his coming.

He swiftly determined that not Jenny, or her Uncle Redmayne, or any back on earth should prevent him from securing Robert Redmayne on the following day if it came within his power to do so. Indeed he felt little doubt that this would happen.

For that night there was no hurry. He slept well after an unusual amount of exercise and enjoyed, and he rose late. He was dressing at half past eight when there came a chambermaid to the door.

"There's a gentleman must see you," she said. "He's by the name of Mr. Doria and he comes from Captain Redmayne out over at 'Crow's Nest.'"

Not sorry that his day's work might now be simplified, Mark bade the girl summon his visitor, and in two minutes Giuseppe Doria appeared.

"So Robert Redmayne, the murderer of Michael Penden, has turned up?" asked Brendon, frowning his disapproval, and Doria showed astonishment.

"Carpe di Diem," How did you know that?" he asked.

"I saw him on my way home," replied Mark. "I had already seen him, before the tragedy on Dartmoor, and I remembered him. What is more, I'm not sure that he didn't remember me."

"We are in fear," continued Doria. "He has not been yet to his brother, but he is near."

"How can you tell that he is near, if he has not yet been to his brother?"

"Thus we know it. I go every morning early to Strete Farm on the hills above us for milk and butter. I go this morning and they have an ugly story. Last night a man entered Strete Farm and took food and drink. The farmer heard him and comes upon him sitting eating in the kitchen—a big man with a red head and a red mustache and a red waistcoat. The man, when he sees Mr. Brook—that is the farmer—he bolts through the back kitchen by which he has come. Mr. Brook knows nothing of the man and he tells me of his adventure, and then I go home to tell padron mio—my master."

"When I describe this man, Mr. Redmayne and Madonna nearly have a fit between them. They recognize him—he is the assassin! They think instantly of you and bid me take my bicycle and ride here at my best speed to catch you, if it may be done before you go."

By nine o'clock the Italian had started homeward, and as soon as he was gone, Brendon went to the police station, borrowed a revolver and a pair of handcuffs, hunted at his business, and ordered a police car to be ready as quickly as possible. A constable drove him and before setting out he told the local chief of police, one Inspector Lunarelli, to await a message over the telephone in the course of the morning. He enjoined strictest secrecy for the present.

Mark, who had studied Mr. Redmayne's large government survey map of the district, suggested an immediate search over the most likely regions in the neighborhood.

He trembled to the belief that the hunted man might sooner trust the woods than the coast.

"If Mrs. Penden doesn't mind the weather and there is no shadow of danger to the launch, then I advise that your niece goes down the coast and has a look into the caves as you propose," he said. "No doubt Doria can be trusted to see sharply after her. Meantime we will quarter the wood. If we could only get into touch with the man, it might be possible to secure him without making any noise."

Mark asked a question.

"When you say that her husband altered his wife's character, in what way did he do so?"

"Well—he taught her sense I reckon. You'd never think now, would you, that she was a red Redmayne—one of us—short of temper, peppery, fiery? But she was, as a youngster. Her father had the Redmayne qualities more developed than any of us and he handed 'em down. She was a wilful thing—pincky and fond of mischief. That was the girl I remembered when Jenny came back to me a widow. And so I see that Michael Penden, what ever else he was, evidently had the trick character to learn her a bit of sense and patience."

They tramped the wood and fell in with a gamekeeper, who greeted the trespassers none too amiably. But on learning their errand and receiving a description of the fugitive, he bade them go where they pleased and himself promised to keep a

"She's at the parting of the ways now," declared Jenny's uncle. "I can see her mind working. I grant she loved her husband dearly enough and he made a pretty deep track on her character, for she's different from what she was as a girl."

Mark asked a question.

"When you say that her husband altered his wife's character, in what way did he do so?"

"Well—he taught her sense I reckon. You'd never think now, would you, that she was a red Redmayne—one of us—short of temper, peppery, fiery? But she was, as a youngster. Her father had the Redmayne qualities more developed than any of us and he handed 'em down. She was a wilful thing—pincky and fond of mischief. That was the girl I remembered when Jenny came back to me a widow. And so I see that Michael Penden, what ever else he was, evidently had the trick character to learn her a bit of sense and patience."

They tramped the wood and fell in with a gamekeeper, who greeted the trespassers none too amiably. But on learning their errand and receiving a description of the fugitive, he bade them go where they pleased and himself promised to keep a sharp watch.

Their hunt produced neither sign nor clue of the man they sought, and after three hours of steady tramping, they returned in the motor car to "Crow's Nest."

News of direct importance awaited them. Jenny had not only seen Robert Redmayne but had reached him; and she returned very distressed and somewhat hysterical, while Doria, having done great things in the matter, was prepared to brag about them.

"We saw him," said Jenny, "about two miles down the coast, sitting not fifty yards from the sea. Then Giuseppe suggested lauding and so approaching him. The thing was to let me reach him, if possible."

"We ran by, as though we had not observed him," then, getting round a little bluff, so that we were hidden, we went ashore, made fast the boat, and regularly stalked him. The poor wretch saw us and leaped up, but it was too late and Giuseppe reached him in a moment and explained that I came as a friend. Doria was prepared to detain him if he endeavored to escape, but he did not."

"Is he sane?" asked Brendon. (Continued in Our Next Issue)

LONDON.—Tucked away in the middle of the English county of Yorkshire there is a sleepy little country village that rejoices in the name of Low Bentham—exactly the kind of name that one would expect a sleepy little Yorkshire village to rejoice in.

There isn't, so far as I know, a single "colored person" in Low Bentham, but there are quite a lot of them in another little town of which many English newspaper readers heard for the first time recently: a town whose name is Ensiskeni and that is located in almost the dead centre of the South African province of East Griqualand. You'll find the latter, if you look for it on the map, away down near the southeasternmost tip of the Dark Continent, probably a couple of hundred miles inland from the port of Durban.

From slumberous Low Bentham to primitive Ensiskeni is roughly 6,000 miles, and it's fairly safe betting that no human being ever has made the direct journey between the two places. But a swallow made it, not long ago, and a tremendous sensation that swallow caused when, thin and exhausted after its flight from Yorkshire to East Griqualand, it tumbled down and was picked up by an excited Kaffir "boy" in the cattle kraal of one Michael Gwensa.

There would seem to be nothing in the mere finding of an exhausted swallow to get excited about, even in Ensiskeni. But the queer and, to the natives, distinctly sinister thing about this particular swallow was the fact that around one of its legs was a little ring, made of aluminum. On the outside of this ring were the words, "Witherby, High Holborn, London," and inside the letters and figures, "J. M. 53."

These mysterious hieroglyphics naturally meant nothing in the young lives of Michael Gwensa's Kaffir "boys", but the finding of the swallow upset them a lot. It looked to them like an omen boding the worst kind of bad luck for Michael, and a clear case of witchcraft for a bird to appear from nowhere with a ring round its leg and alight in somebody's cattle kraal.

It was on the 8th of January last that this happened. The mysterious ring was removed from the leg of the swallow, which soon afterward had recovered enough to resume its customary activities, and was handed over to a local missionary, the Rev. M. Williamson, of Ensiskeni. He kept it and a month or two later showed it as a curiosity to the Bishop of Glasgow, who made a tour in South Africa in the early part of this year, and paid a visit to East Griqualand.

The missionary, apparently, didn't understand the significance of the ring, but the Bishop did. Accordingly, after arriving back in England this month, he dropped a line to "Witherby, High Holborn, London," telling him that one of his bird-marking rings has been found around the leg of a swallow that was found in the cattle kraal of Michael Gwensa, of Ensiskeni, East Griqualand. And Witherby, vastly interested by this intelligence, forthwith looked up "J. M. 53" in his records and discovered that the swallow found in South Africa in January, 1922, had been ringed by H. W. Robinson—one of the most industrious of Witherby's army of bird-markers—at Low Bentham, Yorkshire, on August 8, 1921.

Biggest Bird-Marking System

The finding of this swallow in East Griqualand has vastly interested British ornithologists and the British public generally because it is the sixth one ringed and released in this country and ultimately recovered in South Africa to be reported to Harry Forbes Witherby, whose system of bird-marking is undoubtedly the biggest and most successful one in existence. This system has been in operation only since 1909, and was more or less at a stand-still during the war, and yet, during the twelve years that it has been carried on, no less than 105,435 wild birds, representing over 100 different species, have been marked with the little numbered rings that enable the peregrinations of those of them that are captured to be definitely traced.

Among the many miracles of natural history few are more wonderful than the seeming "sixth sense" in birds that enables them to migrate to enormous distances and then to return to their original homes. How they do it and by what faculty they find their way is still a mystery. It may be one of those things which we shall never understand, but if so it will not be due to any lack of zeal and research on the part of ornithologists like those who compose H. P. Witherby's sizeable corps of assistants, one of whom

Below, a map illustrating the migrations of marked starlings. Each straight line connects the place of ringing and the place of recovery, some of these being as far apart as Courland, Russia, and Tipperary, Ireland, Mid-Lothian, Scotland and Nordland, Norway (above the Arctic Circle), and Wiborg, Finland, and Aude, Southern France. The bird that travelled between the latter two places covered over 1,200 miles.

elled widely to pursue his studies into the habits of the feathered species. He has roamed as far afield as to Russian Lapland, the White Nile, Southern Persia and Algeria, and has embodied the fruits of these expeditions in a number of books which, though scientific, make fascinating reading. He is now 49 and ever since he was seven, he told me yesterday, has devoted practically all his time to studying bird life. For ten years, too, he was Secretary of the British Ornithologists' Club, of which he remains an enthusiastic member. In appearance he is curiously like William J. Locke, the novelist, both being tall, gaunt, and clean shaven, with "scholar" written all over them.

By means of the elaborate system of "ringing" of which Mr. Witherby, whose office is in High Holborn, London, is the inventor, the life stories of wild birds can be pieced together with unerring accuracy. How long wild birds live, where they mate and breed, where they go when winter comes, and why they go—these are some of the fascinating problems that are being solved by the enthusiastic body of bird students whose headquarters overlook one of London's busiest streets.

American Government's Scheme

"Our system of bird-marking,"

Witherby said, "although not the oldest (a distinction that belongs to the one invented by the Danish ornithologist, Morlensen), is, I believe, the most extensive in existence. Similar systems exist in most of the European countries, with the exception, curiously enough, of France, but in the United States, as far as I know, United States, as far as I know, by individuals, some of whom, however, among others Mr. Prentiss Baldwin, have obtained some exceptionally interesting and valuable results. But now, I hear, the American Bureau of Biological Survey is about to inaugurate an official ringing scheme, and no doubt this will be developed on a scale that will make the system of which I happen to be the inventor relatively small and unimportant."

How greatly this official American bird-marking scheme is likely to add to our knowledge of bird life can be judged by the striking results, up to date, of the Witherby system, which certainly is anything but "small and unimportant" alone, during 1921, succeeded in marking over fourteen hundred birds.

Harry Forbes Witherby, who is both editor and publisher of a widely read journal called "British Birds", is himself an ornithologist of distinction, and has trav-Witherby's office in High Holborn and there filed. The rings, as has been said, bear the name of the originator of the scheme, so that, wherever the bird is found in after life, the finder can communicate with the bird chief who, on consulting his records, can trace the history of the wanderer.

Possibly you'll be as curious as I was to know how these ringed birds are "recovered" as the official phrase goes. Witherby was asked to explain.

"Some of the birds fly into houses," he said, "some drop exhausted, as the swallow that was picked up in the South African kraal did, some are found dead and others are shot. Like this, for instance!" And he showed me a ring, taken from a starling, that had reached him in the morning's mail. Attached to the ring was a card with the laconic message: "Punished for pecking my pears. Caught in the act."

"Our percentage of recoveries is small considering the number of birds ringed," Witherby went on. "Of the nearly 8,000 swallows that to our Foreign Office. The capture of others, bearing foreign markings, was reported to the 'competent military authority' by vigilant British coastguards, who were convinced that the birds were enemy agents. One might have thought it would be manifest to anyone that not even the Germans would have pressed wild birds into their intelligence service, as it is impossible, of course, to tell where one will go."

Mr. Witherby was then asked to what extent his "ringing" system had added to our knowledge of the habits of birds.

"We really are only at the beginning of our study," he answered, and it is obvious that results of real importance can be obtained only by ringing birds in very great numbers, in order that the recoveries may be more numerous. Perhaps our system, so far as it has gone, has been of most service in that it has provided striking evidence that migrating birds, such as swallows for instance, do undertake and accomplish gigantic journeys. The sys-that birds do—but their exact course across Africa is a mystery. It is a curious fact, by the way, that all the marked birds have been recovered in the eastern half of South Africa. Why they avoid the west side is another question that remains unanswered, but that we hope to succeed in answering in time.

"Yes, that flight of 6,000 miles is the longest on the part of a bird of which we have actual evidence, but our extensive observation of starlings show that they, too, are great wanderers. One of these birds, which we marked as a nestling in Courland, Russia, in March, 1916, was recovered in Tipperary on March 24 of the following year. It was, as the song said, 'a long way to go!' Another starling marked in Berkshire, England, was recovered in Helsingfors, Finland, a few months later, and still another, 'ringed' at Vitebsk, Western Russia, was recovered in County Down, Ireland. Finally there is the remarkable case of a starling marked as a young bird on June 8, 1914, at Wiborg, Finland, and recovered on July 26, 1915, in Aude, Southern France, a distance of over 1,200 miles."

Feathered Methuselahs Few

One distressing discovery has been made through the Witherby scheme, its inventor said. The infant mortality rate is terribly high. A huge proportion of young birds in their first year die from inexperience, careless flying, inability to avoid traps, and general innocence of the wicked man-world. If birds do not die young they usually die just after middle age—when they are beginning to grow feeble and unable to see the pitfalls that beset them. The veteran of Witherby's band is an old peewit, (a kind of plover). He was nine last birthday and is still going strong. He was ringed when a nestling.

To return, however, to the migrants. How on earth is it possible for wild birds born in a northern country like England to find their way, on the arrival of their first autumn, across land and sea to the tropical regions, hundreds if not thousands of miles away, that for centuries have been the winter quarters of their species? The recovery of the "ringed" swallows in East Griqualand has caused this question to be debated vigorously by British ornithologists. One of them, Lord Waverley, believes that birds are guided by "vibrations", whatever that may mean. Others hold that the possession of a "sixth sense" by the migrants explains the mystery. Others still are convinced that the juvenile birds that never made the migratory flight before are guided by adults who have.

I asked H. F. Witherby for his view.

"I don't consider that we yet have sufficient evidence to enable one to express a definite opinion," he said. "It appears certain, however, that birds that never before have made the migratory flight do make it for the first time without being guided by experienced birds. The young cuckoo, for instance, is known to leave England considerably later than the parent bird. How it finds its way south remains one of the most fascinating of the problems we yet have to solve."

Americans may be interested to know that the point on the coast of England on which most of the migrating birds alight in the spring on completing their long flight from the south, and which is their place of assemblage when they leave this country in the autumn, is now the property of a renowned citizen of the United States. This coast near the ancient town of Christchurch which is thus named because it is supposed to have been also the landing place of the Jute chieftains, Hengist and Horsa.

Hengistbury Head was bought, some while ago, by H. Gordon Selfridge, the Chicago man who owns and runs London's biggest and most famous department store, and who is the tenant of Hinchliffe Castle, a fine example of the stately homes of England, in the near neighborhood. Mr. Selfridge wants to have a country mansion of his very own, however, and has some idea, he told me recently, of building himself an imposing one on the historic headland.

At left, the inventor of the biggest bird-marking system in existence—Harry Ford Witherby, commander-in-chief of the army of British naturalists who, in twelve years, have marked 105,435 wild birds, representing over 100 different species.

Below, Hengistbury Head, the promontory on the south coast of England, which is the first point reached by migratory birds on their arrival in the spring, from the tropical climes in which they winter, and their place of assemblage when they fly back south again in the autumn. This famous headland is now owned by an American, H. Gordon Selfridge, the Chicago man who runs London's biggest store, and whose country home, Hinchliffe Castle, is in the near neighborhood.

have been marked, only 60 have been heard of again; of the 11,381 song-thrushes, 140; and of the 11,966 gulls, 523. No doubt we should learn of many more cases of the finding of ringed birds if the object of the winging was more generally understood. As things stand at present, a surprising number of people both in this country and Europe seemingly have no clear idea of the significance of a numbered ring around a wild bird's leg then the Kaffir boy had who picked up that exhausted swallow.

Rings Puzzle Many

"Some people think that the ringed birds must be pets, which have escaped from an aviary and are puzzled when, for instance, they find one of them in the North of Scotland, to know how a tame bird could have travelled so far from High Holborn, London. Occasionally, somebody writes to apologize for having shot one of my 'pets.' Once in a while, too, I have gulls sent me by people who have mistaken them, owing to the fact that they were marked, for carrier pigeons!"

"And during the war the idea was quite general that birds with numbered rings on their legs must be performing some mysterious service for one or another of the combatants. This belief led, several times to marked birds that were found in Spain and other neutral countries being reported tem, too, has proved the accuracy of certain theories as to the breeding places and winter quarters of migrants which before had been matters of belief only.

"As one instance, it has long been thought by British ornithologists that the swallows that are here during the summer spend the winter in Africa, but it was not until our ringing system was inaugurated that we had actual evidence that they did so. Now, however, that six swallows ringed in England and Scotland in different years have been reported in the eastern half of South Africa it is evident that in any case a considerable proportion of our swallows have their winter quarters in this region.

"The first of the six birds thus traced, ringed in Shaffordshire in May, 1911, was recovered near Utrecht, in Natal, in December, 1912. The journey made by the other birds were from Ayrshire, in Scotland, to the Orange Free State, from Lancashire and Berkshire to the Cape Province, and from Strathgairn, Scotland, to the Transvaal. No, we have so far no evidence as to how long the birds take to accomplish this extraordinary flight of roughly six thousand miles. Nor have we been able to discover, as yet, the course which they take. All that we know definitely about their progress is that they pass through France and Spain. They may cross the Sahara Desert—it has been proved

THERE IS SOMETHING IN IT

A suggestion has been put forth that the army be employed in enforcing prohibition.
On the face of it the idea has something in it. In the first place it could be worked far more cheaply than the present system. In the second it would prove far more efficacious. A soldier is trained to high sense of duty. His first principle is to obey orders. If he were sent out to run down the stiller and the bootlegger there is no question he would bring to his responsibility a high sense of honor and active intelligence. But on the other hand there are serious objections. The tendency would be, where the soldiers were put off to their individual self to seriously mar discipline, while the spying, which would be a necessary incident to their work, would have strong tendency to destroy that fine morale, which is the very essence of the fighter's effectiveness.

Leave the soldier to his arms and let those who arrogate to themselves the divine prerogative of guardian of the public morals disabuse themselves that the way to suppress lawlessness and booze is to choose natural toughs and habitual booze-busters for the job, and order the administration to appoint only honest men therefor. When that is done this eternal jowling about enforcement will be done with too.

HOW IT WILL WORK

WE had a word heretofore to say about the comity of nations.
There is no power to fix what attitude one government shall assume towards another, but necessity and decency of intercourse have gradually evolved certain fixed rules, that have become grouped under the general term of the comity of nations.

The comity of nations, probably, had its origin in that philosophy of childish play, which is known as "tit-for-tat—I treat you as you treat me."

Anyway it found about its first expression among barbarians in the tacit agreement that a government embassy traveling from one country into another should be held safe to go and return. This has been amplified in modern times to the extent of giving ambassadors many immunities and relieving them from restrictions that are placed upon other foreigners, entering the land. For instance an ambassador and all his attaches can enter America without submitting any manifesto, or having their baggage searched, so they have to pay no tariff duties; yes, further than that they are permitted to bring liquor here and serve it in their homes or dwelling places. Representatives of the United States government abroad have the same immunities and privileges—why they are not even compelled to take a drink, if they don't have the habit, though there is more than one that it said to have a superlative habit, once he gets where red rum flows freely.

But to the manner in which the comity of nations works around the other way. Once a brilliant congress conceived the idea it would impose an embargo against foreigners coming here by levying a poll tax of ten dollars a head upon every one disembarking at our ports. Great idea. Promptly adopted for the further reason that it meant more millions for the tax-payers to spend. But the result. Foreign governments with equal promptitude laid a per capita tax of ten dollars against every American coming into their realms. A natural consequence was that the American has to pay anywhere from three to ten times what a foreigner does, because the latter trots all over Europe, while the foreigner comes here only. Certainly, there is a kick, millions of them. Now it is whispered about at Washington that Secretary Hughes is pussyfooting to have the noxious per capita charge taken off.

While President Harding is telling us of the marvelous achievement of his government in having $110,000,000 saved out of receipts for last year, why not be frank enough to take the people into entire confidence in the matter? Granted some achievement to save $110,000,000, even in face of the fact that the receipts were $700,000,000 greater than estimated, why then isn't there money enough to send the foreign parcels post mail out of the country? This country ships millions of dollars of manufactured products to foreign countries annually and Portsmouth contributes not an insignificant part thereto, but today the port postoffice is jammed with parcel post that can't be sent across. The mailers have paid the postage, but the government hasn't the money to pay the ships for carrying it. Not a mortal soul in the United States will ever know this, if he waits for Warren Gamaliel Harding, president of the United States, to tell him.

New York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 2—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Early up and across the town to see Joe Mitchell Chapple, the editor, and he told me of many things and I found him a fellow of fine sentiment and charm.

Back home and with my wife, poor wretch, to a charity fair and masqueraded as a street troubador and cranked a hand organ and let an engaging monkey gather the coins, all great fun it was, too.

To lunch with William Johnston at the Beaver Arms and he tells me he is now writing about New York for newspapers as I do and I only hope he does it better, which he is quite capable of doing.

In the evening to see Laurette Taylor in "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," and the play spoiled by an absent-minded actor who forgot to remove a red robe Nell was to wear. Backstage cries of "Take off your coat!" put the house in laughter. So home and to bed.

The borish young Earl of Northesk who came to New York to marry Jessica Brown of Winter Garden fame, made a great hit with reporters here. He refused to bar any of them from seeing him at any time. He had the idea he was not so important as they thought and admitted he was flattered. As a result the reporters treated him well in their copy. The Earl found that in long run it pays to fraternize with reporters. Incidentally the Earl's neckties and shirts were quite the most dazzling New York has seen since Carpenter was here.

There is a club in New York I like to visit. The membership is composed of men who have succeeded in life and I believe the majority have retired from active affairs. Yet here are men who gather in the late afternoon as well dressed as those in the smartest young men's club. Buttons are adorned with gay boutonnieres, faces are freshly barbered, shoes newly shined and there is a polish and zestful interest in life. These men are not going to become doddering old hunchmen without a struggle. It seems to me a fine thing to erect advancing age with a little defiance. There is a kinship between clothes and the mind. If one dresses youthfully it is an almost certain bet one is going to feel youthful.

Speaking of on-coming years. I dread that period when folk will refer to me as "spry." That, it seems to me, is a complimentary zero. When a man becomes "spry," he has false uppers and lowers, a crack in the back and joints that need oil. Also a toupee.

One of New York's famous pickpockets is what Broadway calls a "dab." His clothes are the outlandish creations of the one night ups. His off hours are spent at the race track with a plump little blonde. Several months ago they were married. He went down to headquarters and announced he was "turning square." He added, "I hope to die if I ever lift another leather." Last week he was arrested for burglary. He said he had kept his word about picking pockets, but he considered burglary more refined.

The last of the cheap concert halls on the Bowery has closed. In the old days the entertainment was free for those who bought beer. The place tried to struggle along on soft drinks, but gave up the ghost. The performers were never applauded. The valets that needed darling singing mother songs were all right for the beer sodden, but, with clear heads, it was quite different.

How the Wren Became King
(By Daniel Henderson)
The birds met in the meadow To choose themselves a king.
"Let's crown," piped up a Warbler, "The bird that best can sing!"

But Buzzard, Jay and Raven Burst forth in wild discord: "The highest, strongest fier Must be the bird tribe's lord!"

Up, up they flew, contending, But sly, weak-pinioned Wren Alighted on the Eagle, And hid, nor flew again.

Until the mighty Eagle Outflung the Lark and cried: "Behold, I am your monarch, Above the clouds I ride!"

But Wren, refreshed from riding, Soared up into the blue, And sang: "Come, crown me, Eagle, I'm looking down at you!"

After the Operation
You may pay me $100 down and $25 a week," said the physician off-hand.

"Sounds as if I were buying an automobile," the patient said.

"No," said the doctor, thoughtlessly, "I am."

A Thorough Job
Father's expensive gold watch had failed him. It wouldn't go at all. "I can't think what's the matter," he complained. "Perhaps it needs cleaning."

"Oh, no, Daddy," objected four-year-old Horace. "Babe and I had it in the bathroom washing it all day yesterday."

Henry Frowine sold his barber shop to Will Cornate.

The Portsmouth Browns reorganized and were scheduled to play a double-header at Waverly on the Fourth. Here's the way the team lined up: Charles Nichols, c; George Smith, p; Charles Ferguson, ss; E. Bowman, 1b; Ed Sauter, 2b; Frank Stepp, 3b; John Galford, 1b; George Joseph and Arthur Smalley, subs.

Lewis Marsh, 12-year-old son of J. I. Marsh, was seriously injured at his father's pop factory on East Tenth street, by the explosion of a soda fountain. The lad was engaged in filling the tank with carbonic gas when it exploded.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. F. Rader, of John street.

The Home City team, of near Cincinnati, beat the Navies by the score of 17 to 12. The game was played on the diamond in the "bottoms."

Ex-Policeman John Herrick arrived home from Waynesboro, W. Va., to spend the Fourth with home folks.

Otto Layher and wife, left for Columbus, their future home.

Commodore Martin Micklethwait and his two companions, George Barr and Henry Molster took two fish from the Ohio river, on the Kentucky Run, one of which weighed 67 pounds and the other 10.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

BASEBALL HISTORY

By Bertion Braley
I've seen Babe Ruth when he lined 'em out
For many and many a circuit clout.
I've seen Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, too,
Performing wonders that thrilled me through.

But the greatest kick that I ever got Came from a game on the home-town lot.
When we hung on our rivals the Indian sign,
By a score of fifty to forty-nine.

FROM two till six of a summer's day
We battled on in bitter fray.
And the crack of hits was a fusillade
As we played, and played, and played and played.

Except for the times when we had to wait
Till the crowd quit fighting around the plate.
For our sporting ethics were none too fine,
When we won by fifty to forty-nine.

I pitched till my arm was wrenched and sore.
Allowing just seventy hits—no more:
While the other twirler, as I recall,
Was socked for a hundred and ten in all!

The errors? Get this into your noggins:
The game was errors and nothing but errors.
Yet, oh the thrill of life was mine
When we won by fifty to forty-nine!
